

Hi everyone. I have a quick programming note. The podcast is steadily closing in on its 100th episode, and yes, I'm counting the supplemental episodes, too. I figured that this would be a good time to do an episode to addressing questions you may have about the novel, the time period, or the novel.

Depending on when you are listening to this announcement, we're about 15 episodes out from reaching the century mark. That's another four to five months away, so we're looking at probably the end of October or early November. That seems like a ways off, but I want to get this announcement out there now, so that there would be time for you to submit questions and for me to prepare answers to those questions. I'll probably stop taking new questions at the end of September so that I can finish writing the episode and record it.

So, if there are questions you've been wanting to ask, now's your chance. Send your questions to 3kingdomspodcast@gmail.com. That email address is listed on the Contact page on the show's website, 3kingdomspodcast.com.

But what happens if you don't get many questions, you might ask. Well, in that case, I'd just answer your questions individually via email and move on with the show. If there's a question that I think is worth addressing to the larger audience for the podcast, I might post it on the website.

Also, I'm going to put forth caveat here that I reserve the right to not answer particular questions or just answer with, "I don't really know," because hey, that's the truth. I'll do my best to have a good answer for all your questions, but as I said at the beginning of this podcast, I'm not a historian, so there are aspects of the novel or this period in history that I will not be able to address knowledgeably, and I'm not going to pretend otherwise.

Alright, so that's it. Submit your questions before September 30, 2016, and hopefully our 100th episode will be a question-and-answer session. I'm eager to see what questions you have. So send them to 3kingdomspodcast@gmail.com. And as always, thank you so much for listening and supporting the show.